As FASER Energy Benchmarking Software Phases Out, EnerCop from Kilojolts Fills the Void

Lexington, MA, December 17, 2010... As December 31, 2010 approaches, the clock is ticking on the phase-out of FASER energy accounting software by the company's owner; no more upgrades, modifications, or support. FASER users are scrambling to find a suitable energy benchmarking and accounting software replacement that offers a robust, innovative solution at a fair and reasonable price. FASER users would do well to include EnerCop from Kilojolts in their due-diligence process for new energy benchmarking software.

FASER users' databases may be converted and imported into EnerCop via Microsoft Excel or Access. Once they're up and running, new EnerCop users will find most of the features they appreciated with FASER (and more) in a simplified, user-friendly interface—benchmark facility energy performance, manage energy budgets, accruals, and variances, and report carbon footprint improvements. Energy data is weather normalized and weather updates and CBECS revisions are sent out monthly.

One unique feature EnerCop offers users is a custom baseline metric. EnerCop™ is the only energy benchmarking and accounting software that allows companies to establish process-driven custom baseline metrics for their facilities' energy usage. That means EnerCop users can align energy metrics with their organization's standardized measures of business performance such as production volume, number of transactions, customers or students, and not simply by comparing MBTU's per square foot, as competitor products do.

EnerCop is a desktop-based solution, running in either Windows XP or in Windows 7 Professional with "XP Emulation Mode." EnerCop is licensed in perpetuity to its users, and licensing is tethered to each unique computer ID. EnerCop Suite (includes benchmarking and accounting) is value priced at $7,900 per license; EnerCop Benchmarking is $4,900 per license.

For information about migrating from FASER to EnerCop call Kilojolts Consulting Group at 1-866-670-5928 or email Gary Markowitz at garym@kilojolts.com. Visit EnerCop online at www.enercop.com.
